

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. PREFACE

For years the most progressive educators have been urging that only good literature should be used in school readers. Some authors of primers have thought it impossible to provide such material within the vocabulary that beginners can learn with ease. Others have used a little real literature with a large amount of unrelated and uninteresting material specially prepared for the sake of word repetition and phonic drill.

Experience proves that all children are interested in and enjoy the simple folk tales, which are the literary products of many minds and have survived the centuries, because they represent certain universal human experiences and satisfy certain common needs of childhood. Through countless repetitions, from one generation to another, they have assumed a form marked by simplicity and a unique literary charm.

After years of careful work we present some of these tales so as to utilize the child's love for the stories and make an easy road to reading. Avoiding the long struggle through forced interest, and the devious byways of artificial methods, we start the child at once into the realm of good, appropriate literature.

The shoemaker will make some shoes,

The boy will shake the oak-tree,

The oak-tree will give me a cup,

The spring will give me some water.

I want it for little Tuppens.

He is choking."

help ground

The dwarfs wanted to help little Tuppens.

They went into the ground.

They got the red iron.

They gave it to the hen.

The hen gave it to the blacksmith.

The blacksmith made a plow,

The farmer gave some corn,

The cow gave some leather,

The shoemaker made some shoes,

The boy shook the oak-tree,

The oak-tree gave a cup,

The spring gave some water.

The hen gave the water to little Tuppens.

Then little Tuppens ate little seeds.

SUGGESTIONS

Briefly expressed, reading is getting thought from the printed page. Oral reading is the much more complex process of getting thought and expressing it to others.

It is a part of the plan of this book that each story be told to the children with much fuller detail, as in the original, before beginning the study of it in the book. Children readily get the brief sentences as given here, and the word-getting follows.

The recognition of words is necessary to getting the thought, but word-recognition or mere word-naming is not reading. Drill upon the words is essential in the early stage of learning to read, though this study of words should be made a separate lesson, or at least kept distinct from the reading of the story.

The drill in word-recognition may be conducted in different ways:

- 1. The child may say the words aloud.
- 2. Some other child may tell him the words.
- 3. If necessary the teacher may tell him.
- 4. The publishers provide large word cards to be held before the class, one at a time, for recognition; or, a number of the cards may be placed in view from which the children pick out words as named by classmates or teacher; or two children may try to find the words first as the teacher names them.

5. The little word cards prepared for seat work may be used for sentence building, or for drill by having pupils put all the same words together.

Both spelling and phonics are aids in learning words. A daily period of fifteen or twenty minutes should be allowed for each.

After these word drills the child may read the thought orally. If he cannot read it another child may do so, or it may be necessary for the teacher to aid by questions, or even to read the sentence for the child. Never let the child drawl out the sentence. If he cannot read it freely he needs more word study, or more help in getting the thought. Whether the child has the thought may be tested by asking him to tell what he has read silently before attempting the oral reading.
